HABITAT HAPPENINGS

NOVEMBER 2026

Habitat for Humanity® of Madison County

FROM THE DESK OF JAN MILLER, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

I recently had the opportunity to attend Habitat for Humanity's International convention in Atlanta with Tina Skeel, celebrating 50 years of Habitat's work around the world. It was a wonderful opportunity to connect with others, learn new ideas, and reflect on how we can continue growing our impact here in Madison County.

One of the most meaningful experiences of our trip was visiting Koinonia Farm in southern Georgia, the spiritual birthplace of Habitat. Founded in 1946 by Clarence Jordan, Koinonia was built on the belief that all people, regardless of race or economic circumstances, deserve the opportunity to live and work as equals. Despite facing significant persecution for these beliefs, the community remained committed to putting its faith into action.

In 1965, Habitat founders Millard and Linda Fuller visited Koinonia and were inspired to help improve housing conditions for local families. From that vision came the concept of partnership housing — families and volunteers working side by side to build affordable homes with no-interest loans for ownership.

The visit was a meaningful reminder of why we do this work: a belief in equality, partnership, and the power of building alongside families. Here in Madison County, we continue that legacy. Every volunteer hour, financial contribution, and prayer helps keep the spirit of Habitat alive.
